Fall Semester 2016

ANTH 311
Public Archaeology: Method and Theory
Monday & Wednesday 9-11 am

*Covers legislation and regulations concerning cultural resources and the historic preservation system of the United States.

*Provides a real-world experience through an archaeological excavation at Rowan Oak to look for evidence of slave quarters, with full participation by the students, to see how the process works.

*This course will prepare both advanced undergraduate and graduate students for employment in the cultural resources management field

Taught by Dr. Tony Boudreaux and Dr. Maureen Meyers, Department of Sociology & Anthropology. For more information, email: thoud@olemiss.edu or memeyer1@olemiss.edu
